In the beginning ...

In 1904, the Invincible™ Electric Bank Protection Company began in Belle Plain, Iowa. Among the products produced were burglar alarms, safe deposit boxes, vaults, and iron safes.

Reorganization took place in early 1913 and the firm began to manufacture metal office furniture in addition to the bank protection products.

The company then headquartered in Monroe, Wisconsin, demanded more room and moved into two adjacent factory buildings in Manitowoc, WI.

The new facility was 19,000 square feet on two floors and was located (at the present site) on the western boundary of the city at the corners of Franklin and 26th Streets. The former mattress and toy plants now became the Invincible™ Metal Furniture Company.

As the United States entered World War I, the U.S. government awarded Invincible™ a contract for metal lockers to be used on Navy ships and other war materials. This contract continued through the end of the war in 1919.

Flying into history ...

Business continued to grow under the leadership of founder John A. Schuette. Mr. Schuette, a WWI aviator, created the aircraft division of the company in the late 1920's. The Invincible™ Center Wing monoplane was the result. "Wings are placed in alignment with the center of the propeller thrust, giving perfect balance and greater speed under all flying conditions."

Three different models were produced. But, as the local paper reported in 1979, "Although the aircraft built by Invincible™ were advanced for their day, the three planes designed were the only ones built. Further production of the aircraft was rudely interrupted by the Depression."

Just furniture ...

By the end of the Depression over half of the country's banks had closed, the market was flooded with used equipment and the demand for new bank protection equipment had evaporated. The company redirected all production and engineering efforts toward office furniture.

During the years after the Depression and into World War II, Invincible™ distinguished itself as a nationally known producer of metal filing products. Factory additions were a regular occurrence. Specialty files, as well as traditional vertical files were the mainstay of the business. A patented "personal safe" could be built into any of the 2, 3, and 4 drawer cabinets.

Beyond file cabinets ...

It wasn't until World War II was over that Invincible™ introduced their first line of desks.

The Modernaire was introduced in 1948. It became the signature product line of the company for the next 50 years and is still produced today as the M-Line desk.

Desking systems were expanded again in 1960 with the introduction of the S-Line series. Soon to become the industry standard, the S-Line has been imitated by many and equaled by none. By 1970 a cleaner look became popular and the Cube Desk burst into corporate offices across the country.

Beyond desks ...

Later in the 1970's panel system "cubicles" became the norm for offices throughout the world.

Invincible™'s entry into the panel system market followed our tradition of excellent design and engineering to give us a system that was built beyond BIFMA specifications. One of the only panels available with a complete steel core, we have greater "hang-on" strength than most any other panel system.

More recently, Invincible™ has introduced VISTA. This line of modular configurable furniture has the unique ability to combine our full height panels, traditional casegoods and privacy screens. Bringing together attractive design, easy installation and functionality, and the ability to reconfigure, VISTA has become our leading product line in the new millennium.

As the company grew through the 1980's and 90's, manufacturing and warehousing expanded to over 300,000 square feet. A growing network of contract furniture dealers led by an organization of independent manufacturer's representatives was developed to serve customers across the nation. Showrooms were opened in Chicago, New York, and other major markets.

A New Chapter ...

In May of 2008, the Invincible™ Metal Furniture Company was purchased by regional entrepreneur and investor Mr. Steven Schenian. Mr. Schenian recognized the value of the company's skilled workforce. He also understood the quality of the Invincible™ product line that had been engineered to high standards and refined over many years. So began a new era. The company now operates under the name IMF Solutions, LLC, d.b.a. Invincible™ Furniture Solutions.

Shortly after purchasing the company, Steve hired James Lieser as President and CEO. Jim brought to Invincible™ 25 years of leadership experience in marketing and manufacturing and has instilled a culture of employee-driven continuous improvement. Invincible™ has made a renewed commitment to providing affordable high-quality products and excellent service. After large investments in automated cutting, piercing and bending equipment, laser cutting technology, automated material handling equipment, and plant reconfiguration, Invincible™ is positioned for growth.

In 2014 Invincible™ entered the laboratory products market. Invincible™ assessed the market as "underserved" as lead-times were extremely long and delivery performance was very unpredictable. Invincible™ core competencies are well suited for the production of metal laboratory casework and fume hoods. The company also had a unique opportunity to hire high-caliber employees with a wealth of laboratory products experience as Hamilton Scientific (previously located in the Manitowoc-Two Rivers, Wisconsin area), closed their doors.

Invincible™ has introduced a full line of metal laboratory casework, as well as fume hoods, and is helping to fill a market need.

In 2014 Invincible™ also was awarded a new 5-year GSA contract covering the entire Invincible™ catalog and running through 2019. Our GSA contract, national NCPA contract, numerous state contracts and programs, and strong partnerships with office furniture dealers across the country allow us to effectively service higher education, healthcare, government, K to 12, and commercial customers. Our dealer partners are supported by high caliber Independent Sales Representatives with extensive office furniture experience. Invincible™ is the preferred choice for discerning, value-conscious customers desiring quality products at fair prices.

Invincible™ with great resolve and conviction boasts, “Proudly Manufacturing in the U.S.A. since 1913”. The products that our employees, our dealers and our sales leaders represent are indeed products we are proud of. We have seen together world wars, the Great Depression, men on the moon, national tragedy, and America’s extraordinary resolve and the ability to recover. We thank you, our customers, for the trust you place in us. We especially appreciate your on-going support. Thank you!
